Spinola Discusses Independence for Colonies in Africa

By Marvine Howe

LEBON, June 11 (NYT).—Provisional President Antonio de Spitoday rejected immediate independence for Portugal's colohut recognised that the right to independence was implicit in offer of self-determination.

In his first major policy statement on the colonial question since April 25 military coup. Gen. Spinola declared that the focal point ris program was self-determination. He insisted, however, on the d to establish first "a climate of freedom and the perfect functionmg of democratic institutions."

Gen. Spinols said that the people of Portugal's overseas ter-ritories would be given various political solutions to choose from: Federation, confederation, com-munity or the mere existence of totally independent states." Four-Point Program

For the first time, the President of the provisional government spelled out his four-point program for decolonization: The restoration of peace. Accelerated reconstruction and development. · The establishment of broad democratic organizations and the accelerated regionalization of po-litical, economic and social struc-

· Popular consultation to determine a final political solution. Gen. Spinola spoke at a formal ceremony for the nomination of the new governors of Angola and Mozambique. Underlying the importance of the occasion was the esence of most of the members of the provisional government as well as members of the Council of State, which includes officers from the Military Movement who carried out the coup. : -

Kissinger Threatens to Resign, Demands, Gets Senate Review

On Wiretaps

By John Herbers

SALZBURG, Austria, June 11 (NYT) .- Secretary of State Henry Kissinger, in an extraordinary oews conference in which he appeared choked with hurt and anger, said today that he would resign unless he is cleared of allegations that he participated in "illegal or shady activity" in government wiretapping of individuals. The surprise development came on the eve of President Nixon's ocparture for the Middle East aud seemed to threaten to divert atteotion from that journey and back to the Watergate-related scandals afflicting the admin-istration in Washington.

Yet Mr. Eissinger, who flew here last night with Mr. Nixon to participate in the trip, was so filled with emotion over charges that he improperly joitlated wiretaps on persons suspected of national security leaks in the first Nixon term that he called the conference to deliver his ultimatum and ask the Senate Foreign Relations Committee to reopen an investigation of the

In Washington, the committee said it would reopen the inquiry. Mr. Kissinger, his voice shaking, told the news conference

"I do not believe that it is possible to conduct the foreign policy of the United States under these circumstances when the character and credibility of the secretary of state is at issue. And if it is not cleared up, I will resign."

Honor at Issue' At another point, he said that he could continue to serve as secretary of state only "if my houor is not at issue and if the public deserves to have my confidence."

"If that cannot be maintained, I cannot perform the duties that I have exercised and in that case, I shall turn them over immediately to individuals less subject to public attack," he said.

It was known in Washington before he left Mooday morning that Mr. Kissinger was brooding over leaks of documents and interpretations by unidentified sources that he had played a much more important role in the wiretapping of government offlcials and reporters than he had acknowledged. He had clearly been under physical and mental stress, having completed 34 days of negotiations in the Middle

During an hour and 10 nunutes of monologue and response to questions. Mr. Kissinger did not smile once. His indignation seemed to rise as the news conference progressed. His voice broke and his face was stern. "Last Thursday," he said in his opening remarks, "a number of you commented on the fact that I seemed irritated, angered, flustered, discombobulated. Ehrlichman Case Separated In Trial on Ellsberg Break-In

By Robert Smer

WASHINGTON, June 11 (IET). Citing President Nixon's "resis-tance to a lawful trial subpoens." federal Judge Gerhard Gesell today ordered the trial of former top presidential aide John Ehrlichman separated from that of three other defendants in the Ellsbreak-in case. He postponed the Ehrlichman trial indefinitely.

Judge Gesell declared that the President's continued insistence that he alone can decide what evidence will be turned over and his refusal "to make documents available to the court in camera ... makes it impossible for the court to properly perform its duty" to conduct a fair trial.

The judge added that he would very soon" issue orders to enforce Mr. Ehrlichman'a subpoenas for White House material.

Judge Gesell ordered that the trial of the three other men inbreak-in at the office of Daniel Elisberg's psychiatrist begin on schedule next Monday. The three men are Bernard Barker, Eugenio Martinez and Gordon Liddy, all of whom either pleaded guilty or were convicted in the original Watergate burclary trial.

Compromise Rejected

At today's brief hearing, the judge also rejected a new White House compromise which would have allowed Mr. Enrlichman to examine his files while his attorneys waited in another room. Last week, the attorneys were forced to wait in their car outside the V/hite House while Mr. Ehrlichman looked over filed papers.

Mr. Ehrlichman's attorney, William Frates, told the judge that his client "finds the proposal completely unacceptable and in violation of the Sixth Amendment" guarantee of right to counsel Judge Gesell agreed.

Furthermore, the President decided, in each case, what material would be surrendered to the court. Judge Gesell has repeatedly steted that the court and nut the President would make the final decision as to what material would be used for the trial.

Fall of Government Forebodes Real Trouble for Italy This Time The idea of setting this re-markably unpalateble dish be-

By Claire Sterling.

ROME, June 11 (WP).-The fall of Premier Mariano Rumor's latest government—he has headed five of the 36 regimes this country has had since World War II-is not just another of Rome's boring political non-events. This time, Italy is really m trouble.

The outgoing cabinet set records of sorts by managing to stay in power for no more than 39 days. The most wretched of its predecessors had hung on for 123, in 1960. Having inherited a lamentable situation, it leaves behind a still worse one. In the short and tormented lifetime of this ex-cabinet, Italy has very nearly skidded out of control economically and politically.

The rate of inflation, approaching 20 percent this year, is the ubt that the United States highest in the industrialized world. The halance of payments deficit, running to $1 billion a month is likely to exceed $12 billion in 1974. The national hudget has become a bookkeeper's nightmare. The State Electrical Board is $1 billion in the red. The slate hospitals, with debts of $5 billion, are threatening to close down altogether this week because they cannot pay the $50 million they owe for cotton and gauze, or get any more of either until they do. Half the nation's larger towns and cities will not have a dime to meet next month's payrolls.

The Central Bank, after borrowing $10.5 hillion abroad in the last two years, is down to barely enough cash for this month's commitments. Its situation could become intolerable within a matter of weeks without still more foreign loans, which the friendliest of states are more and more reluctant to give. The one it had counted on drawing from this very week, a $3-billion credit from the U.S. Federal Reserve Bank, would be available only on conditions which an ungoverned, if not ungovernable, Italy is hardly in a position to meet.

It does not take much expertise to deduce from all this that the Italians are living wildly beyond their means, and that salvation can lie only in working more and spending less. Everybody here knows that, including the labor unions and even the Communists. But not many have

As usual here in such circumstances, it passed the buck to the governor of the Central Bank, Guido Carli, who may be a whiz in international finance but is no magician. A Poll on Nixon Barred in Saigon

SAIGON, June 11 (NYT) .- The South Vietnamese government has ordered an opposition newspaper to abandon a survey of readers' attitudes on whether President Nixon should be impeached.

The paper, Dien Tin, had received 543 responses to a pub-lished questionnaire, but had not had a chance to print any results before the government order.

The papers's staff member in charge of the poll said 92 per-cent of those responding wanted Mr. Nixon out of office, with 80 percent contending that the President was an obstacle to peace in Vietnam, Since Dien Tin is an anti-government paper, its readers are likely to be anti-government as well, and therefore npposed to U.S. involvement in

The armed forces movement, however, retains direct access to Gen. Spinola not only through officers on the provisional pres-ident's staff, but through Gen. Francisco da Costa Gomes, chairman of the joint chiefs of staff and vice-president of the National Salvation Junta, which remains at the top of the complex post-revolutionary power structure. Gen. Costa Gomes is thought to be much more in sympathy with the movement's idealistic young officers than Gen. Spinola. Gen. Costa Gomes, in effect, took part in an aborted military coup against Salazar in 1961 because he believed that Portugal could not win a colonial war to preserve its African colonies. At the time Gen. Teller Urges U.S. to Forgo Atom Secrecy

WASHINGTON, June 11 (AP). Soviet research, not spying, has put Russia ahead of the United States in the nuclear arms race, committee vesterday.

Dr. Teller, a leading developer of the hydrogen bomb, was arguing for an end to most secrecy surrounding nuclear technology. He said secrecy impedes the work of American scientists and fails to halt Russian progress.

The Russians, he told the Senate Government Operations Committee, "are moving ahead at a rapid rate while we are practically standing still. There is no doubt. Russia is No. 1."

Dr. Teller said that he believes word of any major scientific breakthrough in the United States will reach the Soviet Umon in a year or less, "The number of people to whom the main lines of relevant information about nuclear weapons is available is probably between 100,000 and one

"Under these conditions, one must accept the conclusion that nuclear secrets, as a general rule, are secrets in name only."

Dr. Teller proposed that Congress legislate the declassification of most basic scientific information immediately and create a two-year classification for some details. Only a very few pieces longer or more securely than that, he said. He said that while novel ideas and plans for such weapons can be classified for the two-year period, "the general ideas concerning nuclear weapons should be made available to the public."

Secrecy, Dr. Teller said, instills a false feeling of safety and permits people to avoid the hard decisions that they would have to face if all the facts were out in the open. In the nuclear field, he said, secrecy has the effect of raising unwarranted fears of the unknown, "It may be appropriate if [the] exaggerated secrecy which started in the field of nuclear weapons would be first abolished in this same field," Dr. Teller said.

Hard Core for Nixon

Rep. Rhodes attributed a stiffening of Republican support for the President in the House to a growing realization by GOP members that "there is a hard core of support" for Mr. Nixon among their constituents.

"I knew it was there, but I didn't know how big it was" until after his statement in early May implying that Mr. Nixon ought to consider resignation, Rep. Rhodes said, "My mad switched from 3-to-1 anti-Nixon to 8-to-1 pro-Nixon," he said,

"Any Republican who thinks he can win a congressional election without that hard-core support is more optimistic than I am," he said.

Rep. Rhodes said the argument that Republicans might justify a vote for impeachment as a way of assuring Mr. Nixon a fair trial "will not fly." He said any member "will be in trouble at home" if he votes for impeachment and the Senate "knocks the case down flat."

The President's Trip: A New Policy

President Nixon is scheduled to arrive in Cairo today on the first leg of a trip that skeptics believe is a diplomatically unnecessary if not mischlevous journey launched to bolster his anti-impeachment claim that he is indispensable to world peace. From that jaundiced view, we dissent. Mr. Nixon may indeed have obvious political purposes in connection with the impeachment process now unfolding-in becoming the first president (except for FDR's wartime trip to Cairo) to visit not only Egypt but Saudi Arabia, Syria, Israel and Jordanin that order. And he has already made clear, from the attendant fanfare, that he intends to make the most of it, politically. But there are important and legitimate foreign-policy purposes to be served as well.

His mission lets Mr. Nixon do a lot more than personally associate himself with the Israeli-Egyptian and Israeli-Syrian disengagement accords. Barring mishaps, it should help consolldate the great improvement in American standing in the Arab world of the past nine months. The Presidant brought about this improvement by supporting Israel firmly in the October war and thus convincing Arabs be was a serious man, and then by demonstrating he understood the Arabs' desire to regain their lost territory and to focus on economic development. Mr. Nixon showed he realized that only by friendship with Arabs as well as Israelis could the United States, at once, work toward a Mideast political settlement, limit the spread of Soviet power in the region and try to assure a steady flow of Arab oil. So it happens now that on the Arab side Mr. Nixon will be roundly halled where he and most other American leaders were being reviled only a short time ago.

On the eve of his trip he received in Washington the Saudi Arablan heir-apparent, who signed economic and military "cooperation" agreements. The agreements express the U.S. need for good relations with the state having the world's largest oil and cash reserves and Saudi Arabla's need for American technology, development aid, political patronage and arms. The public amiles cloak a relationship of sheer expediency: The values which the two nations celebrate could hardly be more diverse. Mr. Nixon's cultivation of Saudi oil also cuts directly across his announced "Project Independence." But the American interest in cooperating with Saudi Arabia in mutually functional ways, at least in the short term, is very strong.

In Egypt, Mr. Nixon will be greeted by a leader, President Sadat, who has bet his political life that, in return for Egyptlan moderation, the United States will press Israel to withdraw back to the 1967 line and will help Egypt rebuild and tackla its extreme poverty. Before 1973, Mr. Sadat tried to achieve these aims by relying on Moscow. The war and its aftermath led bim to turn to Washington. By his presence, President Nixon symbolizes and advances this change, whose significance to the United States is bard to overstate. In Syria. Mr. Nixon will be encountering a country which is taking its first very tentative steps along the accommodation path ploneered by Egypt. In Jordan, he will be dealing with an old and reliable, but nervous, American

Mr. Nixon will find Israel in the double throes of organizing a new government and preparing politically and psychologically to cope with the first chance for peace with lts neighbors in its 26 years as a state. It will be bis difficult task to assure Israel of the continuing friendship of the United States and to coax it toward a regional settlement, at the same time. The new Israeli premier, Mr. Rabin, is bimself a practiced Washington hand whose close tles with the President and Secretary of State Kissinger should help the two sides work out American-Israeli relations in a way consistent with old loyaltles and new imperatives

Five countries in slx days means fast going, with little enough chance for communications and none for real negotiation. In that sense Mr. Nixon's trlp is ceremonial. But especially in the Mideast, ceremony Itself can be substantive. That an American President can make such a tour signifies the new American position in the region and the new American possibilities-and pitfalis-in diplomacy and in economic and political affairs. The tour should also enhance the President's general hargaining position when he goes to Moscow barely a week after his return. So there is sound diplomatic justification for a presidential tour of the Mideast, however hastily it may have been planned and whatever the President may do to exploit it for his own domestic political gain. For all the overblown -and overworked-rhetoric about peacemaking and the rest, the fact is that Mr. Nixon did a great deal to improve the situation in the Mideast and to make it possible to make the trip at all.

THE WASHINGTON POST.

Inching Toward Peace

Tha Mozambique Liberation Front, Frelimo, and the government of Portugal seemed to have made an excellent beginning the other day toward peace in southeastern Africa. Meeting in Lusaka under the auspices of the Zambian government, Samora Macbal, president of Frelimo, and Marlo Soares, foreign minister of Portugal, talked like men intent on ending a war.

But the next day they suspended their discussions, apparently because they could not agree on whether a cease-fire or independence was to be the first Item on their agenda.

Despite this break-off, there appears to be a good deal of underlying agreement. On arriving in Lusaka. Mr. Sources said that he came as an anti-colonialist and anti-fascist, For his part, Mr. Machal said that Frelimo was fighting neither the Portuguese people nor whites generally: the enemy was "Portuguese colonialism and fascism." Frelimo had previously declared that Mozambique's right to independence was clear and inalienable, and the Portuguese government has already accepted the inevitability of an independent Mozamblque within the year.

When the talks resume next month, there is basis for hope that the spirit of civility and accommodation, so apparent on the first day in Lusaka, will move the parties to an agreement that will end a bloody war of almost 10 years' duration.

French Nuclear Testing

The technical achievement will be something on which French scientists can rightly look back with satisfaction. But the cost has been colossal, and one wonders if the French nuclear program has always absorbed the cost to best advantage. It is a program which probably merits more internal criticism rather than less.

-From the Times (London).

Britain's EEC Membership

When the decision finally comes to be taken, it should be seen in a deeper perspective. It is not only a matter of wbo pays the European Economic Community's bills and how it provides for its farmers, but of Western Europe's will and ability to survive. With Italy nearly bankrupt, with France still separatist, with Britain in a defeatist and insular mood which Labor has done little to lift, and with West Germany carrying an undue burden, optimism about Europe's immediate future is misplaced. The Community will have to streamline its bureaucracy, simplify its procedures, make its Parliament a living force, and recover its sense of purpose if it is to regain momentum. Yet

If it fails every ex-member will suffer in trade and prosperity and the promise of political cobesion will be lost. For Britain to pull out of the Community or to watch passively while it disintegrates will be a fearful retreat. . . .

-From the Guardian (London),

Nixon in the Mideast

Of course, getting away from Watergate, and Watergate-ridden Washington must be an element, among others, in the President's mind in undertaking the tour. But it has strategic importance way beyond that. What has bappened since the Arab-Israeli October war is that the United States has emerged as the only outside power with the ability to influence both sides in the dispute. As much credit for this remarkable development may well be due to President Sadat of Egrot as to Mr. Rissinger. It was he who offered the opening for America's re-entry, and Mr. Kissinger, backed by Mr. Nixon, who has brilliantly risen to the occasion. That the President is to visit Damasous, for long regarded as almost a Eussian fieldom, is endence enough of the dramatic change of

have tended to reduce their own ability either to defend them-

Meanwhile, congressional pres-from Europe have increased to the point where most European leaders believe that a cutback will eventually take place. Far from raising their own force levels to fill the gap, the Europeans are making their own cuts. At the gained something very close to nuclear parity with the United

LONDON-It is symbolic perhaps of the present difficul-ties in the Atlantic Alliance that. 25 years after its birth, members of NATO were unable to agree on a proper way to celebrate the anniversary this spring.

In order, however, to avoid the temptation to exaggerate the current atrains and stresses we must not fail to appreciate that sinca the creation of the Alliance the international system has undergone profound changes. For one thing, the sharp tension between East and West and our fear of military aggression have receded In deterring aggression and abating tensions the Alliance has indeed been a major success. For another, the very relaxation of tensions has posed serious problems for toe West: for changed international climate bas reduced the pressure for unity and has made it easier for centrifugal and divisive forces to assert themselves. In domestio politics, in particular, reai or imagined détente has made it more difficult to maintain sufficlent national defense capabilities. the appropriations for which are seen increasingly as competing with domestic needs, This presenis a constant threat to European-American diplomacy, which must be based on gradualism and reciprocity in promoting changa with the East.

Moreover, the decreased pressure for political and ideological unity in the wake of détente unleashes a variety of potentially destabilizing social forces and, unless a coordinated effort to guide prudently the so-called process of change is made, détente may well lead to new crises.

Blackmail Likely

While military aggression continues to remain a possibility for which NATO must at all times be prepared, the probability of security crises has seriously shifted from direct aggression to types of threat in which external political pressure and blackmail is likely to be more frequent than the overt use of military force. Contrary to growing beliefs, these developments make a coordinated Western security policy more, and not less. imperative.

In this context, bilateral negotiations between the United States and the Soviet Union could be useful, if handled skillfully, without diplomatic hocus-pocus and with proper consultation, in reducing the risks of war and thereby becefit international stability. Above all, it is most essential that America avoid the slightest impression that the two superpowers are acting over the heads and at the expense of the West Europeans. Settlements which appear to exclude member nations and disregard their essential security interests are bound to erode mutual confidence in European-American relations. Indeed, the role of the Alliance in European-American affairs is most essential for providing the degree of political collesion which is the indispensable condition for détente diplomacy, including specifically the current series of discussions with the Soviet Union and its allies on European security and cooperation, SALT-2 and mutual and balanced force reductions.

Despite this need for political cohesion, lowever, acrimony and controversies in the field of trade, investment and monetary relations reflect the fact, it would seem, that the countries of Western Europe and North America have to date not developed an effective system of international management of the highly ioterdependent economies of the industrialized world, The strains caused by disagreements over economic arrangements, as well as by political and defense issues, have led in recent mooths to a serious weakening of European-American relations and to an erosion, to some degree, of Dublic support on both sides of the Atlantic for close ties between Western Europe and the United

Henry Kissinger has summed up the difference between the European and the American approach by claiming that whereas the United States has global interests. Western Europe has only regional interests. Another way of putting it is that there has been some imprecision in the North Atlantic Treaty from the very beginning. One of its key clauses pledges the signatories to consider an armed attack against oze as an attack against all "to senters and victims of Soviet persecution. In fact, the determination to avoid nuclear conflict had characterized the policy of America and the Soviet Union for many years before talk of détente became fashionable-the first instance was the Cuban confrontation of 1962, and the latest example is the worldwide U.S. alert last October.

Western Goal

Much significance, in this connection lies in the different interpretations of détente in the West and in the East, which in no small degree adds to suspicion and friction inside the Alliance and between its members. To start with, the Soviet concept of peaceful coexistence and detente has little in common with the Western goal of constructive cooperation, and Western proposals for freer exchange of ideas and information as part of the promotion of security, cooperation and détente are described by the Soviets as "ideological subversion." constituting an attempt to return to the cold war.

In a just-completed 14,000-word all-embracing atudy of détente by a group of eminent British and American scholars and writers, which included among others Prof. Schapiro, R. Ploes. G. Crossman, L. Labedz, J. Erickson, R. Conquest, E. Shils, B. Lewis, B. Crozier, P. J. Vatikiotis and this writer, it is stated: "In Soviet terminology détente or 'peaceful coexistence' denotes a strategic alternative to overtly militant antagonism against tha so-called 'capitalist countries.' It does not imply the abandonment by the Soviet Union and its allies of conflict with the liberal Western countries. It does not about class warfare and about the 'ideological' conflict between the 'two systems' with the aim of replacing the capitalist (democratic) system by the Communist system. The point is emphatically and repeatedly made in Soviet theoretical pronouncements intended for consumption within the Communist bloc. Detente means a change of methods. Head-on conflict is to yield to indirect methods of combat, using nonmilitary means, described as 'ideological': in Soviet practice this term covers subversion, propaganda, political blackmail and intelligence operations." Indeed, the Soviet leadership makes no secret of the fact that its opposition to Western ideas and to any significant "liberalization" inside its borders is total and irreconcilable. Such an un-relenting attitude is incompatible with any development of real progress to genuinely friendly reistions between the two sides. Until "liberalization" takes place, or until, at least, there are some signs of serious progress in that direction, we are entitled to take all the other elements in détente in current Soviet policy as temporary and tactical in nature. A genuine détente is, of course most desirable, but in its present form it has unfortunately proved to be an instrument in the process of weakening the West, as it has succeeded in hiding from it the political and military realities of the situation and lowered the threshold of the risks from the Soviet Union. As the abovementioned détente study put it: It made possible the presentation in the West of political failures as successes for peace, of businessmen's fantasies ebout profits as rational enterprises in the interests of the state, of Western military decline as an achievement leading towards strategic stability. It is time for the West to recover its sense of reality if Western civilization is to survive." Mesnwhile, let us hope that the picture of political disunity, both within Europe, and between Europe end America, which can only gladden the hearts of their adversaries, will soon come to an end. There is little doubt that the Atlantic countries ed with Japan-possess hitherto unimagined, human material. technical and scientific resources as well as the capability to in-fluence the course of the world to desirable ends. The challenge is to mobilize our capabilities and to enlist the skills and enthutive to nuclear war. This false alternative provided in the past the underlying premise for those dasms of all our people task of political far-sighted leadership in the free democratic societies is to recognize the realities, to articulate the common interests, and to inspire a renewed sense of community and pur-

CAMBRIDGE, Mass.—One of the most important internstional meetings of recent years opens next week at Caracas, Venezuela, Some 130 nations will gather at the first working conference called by the UN on drafting a legal code for the sea around us. It is already evident that the problems are enormously complex and therefore a second session has been tentatively scheduled next yest in Vienna.

The political world has only now begun to realize how important the sea is to everyone alive. It occupies 70 percent of the earth's surface including vast actual food supplies in marine life and potential hydroponic iarms.

Its bottom contains immens and hitherto little explored deposits of valuable minerals, in-cluding untold quantities of petroleum. Its caverns and mighty currents present hiding places for the ultimate weapons now available. Nevertheless this great treasure trove—or Pandora's Box. depending on how it is used-is not yet subjected to an agreed system of international law.

3-Mile Limits

Traditionally the seas have been considered free in peacetime and subject in wartime to the domination of strong naval powers. Territorial waters, bordering maritime nations, have been theoretically limited to regions within three miles of national constlines, the distance of a cannon shot when the concept was first applied.

"But even that outmoded limitation has been ignored for years. Narrow straits like the Dardanelles or Skagerrak or artificial passages like the Snez and Panama Canals, are subject to special regulations. And continually changing interpretations of the extent of national fishing rights or the subsurface continental shelf have been proclaimed by individual capitals.

The problems presented by the tangle of claims and counterclaims are enormously difficult to resolve. For example, if 200-mile limits are now considered territorial waters, as many lands with rich fishing resources insist, more than 30 percent of the existing free ocean spaca would be cur-

In 1945 President Truman announced a doctrine giving the nearest coastal state exclusive rights to resources on the continental shelf bordering it. But this left the waters above this shelf open to anyone as "high seas' beyond the three-mile limit applied to the surface.

For a considerable time question of fixing new marit limits mainly concerned fish Psru and other less develo lands backed the 200-mile 1 when modern trawler fie cruised regularly in the teen ofishore waters. On Cannabis in his review of Experience" (IHT, June 5), John Walker remarks that he read our book three times, twice "high" and once sober. One might consider such an effort a mark of respect for the material. Unfortunstely this was not the case with Mr. Walker whose review reeks of incomprehension, innuendo and factual error, I would appreciate the opportunity to correct some of the more obvious distortions.

1. Prof. Calvin Hernton and myself did not claim that cannabis is a "universal panacea." That is Mr. Walker's term. We did stress the importance of accepting a person's experience at face value. And we did point out that marijuana and hachish can affect a person's experience in many ways. But we emphasized that no single experience can be accepted as an effect of cannabis. tha contrary, experiences which result from the use of the drug are trends which are themselves determined by the interrelationships of three basic factors: the drug, tha person (his personality expectations) and the context (where the drug is used and with whom).

2. It is a relevant fact that a significant number of individuals have had what might be termed transcendental experiences after using cannabia. This has been verified by other studies. If after a self-confessed 16-year period of smoking pot, Mr. Walker remains stuck in one of Dante's Circles of Hell (nine to be exact, not 24, as Mr. Walker overstated), one can only say that this is not typical of the average or long-term

3. Thirty-five people stated that they experienced a heightened perception and appreciation of literature after smoking pot Mr. Walker queries whether this is really true. In fact, we discussed this issue in great detail, and pointed out that what cannabis ems to do is to change the relaionship between the artist and

Vine Over-Extends Welcome in U.S. South

By B. Drummond Ayres Jr. ATLANTA June 11 INYT :-Once upon a time, back around the turn of the century, there was a farmer named C.E. Pleas who lived in a little town called Chipley in the Florida pan-

en i saggi galekte til av sekt av i slagte er

One day Pleas obtained a little green plant that previously had been seen only in the Orient, where no one had paid it much

He was led to believe that the plant, which resembled a grape-vine without grapes, would climb a trellia and shade his porch from the hot Southern sun.

When it did not, he pulled it up and tossed it onto the trash pile, where it took root and gicw . . and grew . . . and grew. Such is the legend of kudzu, the vine that is eating the South.

Increasingly Trooblesome

Three-quarters of a century after Pleas reportedly uprooted and discarded his single plant, it remains alive, robust and inreasingly troublesome — cooking valuables stands of pine in Mississlppi, shorting out electric lines in Alabama, creeping up the sides of high-rise hulldings in downtown Atlanta, entwining itself around the Southern psyche.

Pleas, it seems, shipped a few kudzu tendrils to his friends liv-ing elsewhere in the South when he discovered that his cows thrived on the vine's succulent leaves

His friends, some of them employees of the U.S. Soil Conservation Service, found that the vine also would stop erosion when planted in washed-out gullies or on newly cut railroad and highway embankments:

In Mississippi, between Jackson and Yazco City, some roads are walled in by the kudzu that hangs from adjacent trees. In Georgia, on the way from Jasper to Blainesville, kudzu has climbed the side of a mountain. In Alahama, near Birmingham, airplanes routinely fly reconnaissance missions in search of Eudzu tendrils that threaten to pull down power lines. Harold Martin, an Atlanta author, says kudzu once climbed a tree in his father's backvard. then reached down and snatched up a nearby well cover, A retired official of the Soil Conservation Service, Paul Tabor, 81, of Athens, Ga., says:

You have to remember that kudzu became popular between the two World Wars, at a time when the South didn't have any money and the farms were wasiing away because the boll weevil had ruined the cotton.

"A lot of folks saw kudzu as the way to stop erosion and as a way to feed cattle. Farmers and U.S. government people planted it everywhere, the Lord only knows how many acres-How many acres of kudzu are still in good repute. Cope planted kudzu on the farm where he lived and subsequently calculated that a single acre, if left alone for a century, would spread across 13,000 acres. In newspaper columns and radio broadcasts, he ballybooed kudzu as the agricultural salvation of Taiwan is one of the best places in the world for investment capital. Naturally, Continental Bank is there.

Accelerated economic growth is a consistent theme in Taiwan.

The Republic's GNP has quadrupled in the past two decades, and informed economists predict further substantial gains.

In addition to this confirming record of growth, three factors make Taiwan extremely appealing for industrial investment: 1) a labor force whose productivity increases more rapidly than its wages, 2) a very sympathetic business climate featuring such incentives as a five-year business income tax holiday, or accelerated depreciation of fixed assets, plus a waiver of duty on machinery and equipment, and 3) a relatively sophisticated industry as a source of supply.

Concern about the economic ramifications of Taiwan's international political problems appears manifestly misplaced. Taiwan's share of world trade continues to increase steadily.

Moreover, the mood in Taipei is optimistic, as evidenced by the fact that construction is booming.

Those familiar with Continental Bank's policy of focusing on key world markets will not be surprised to learn that Continental has been active in Taiwan for over a decade. Continental was initially represented through correspondent banks, then—growing with Taiwan—added an affiliate and a representative office. In January of 1973, because of Taiwan's predictable increasing importance in the world business community, Continental Bank opened a full service branch at 62 Nanking East Road, Section 2, Taipei, Taiwan.

"For the United States to with-Graw into a shell of isolationism in the 1970s would be tragic for America and would dash every hope for peace in the world," Mr. Ford said.

He emphasized that "unilateral U.S. troop cuts would undermine our negotiations with the Soviet Union directed at mutual force reductions in Central Europe."

Last Thursday the Senate rejected proposals by majority leader Mike Mansfield, D-Mont. to reduce the number of U.S. troops on foreign soil. But Sen. Allen Cranston, D-Calif., has said that when President Nixon returns from Moscow there will be another attempt to pass troopreduction legislation.

Mr. Ford again praised Secretary of State Henry Kissinger for his Middle East truce efforts and paid tribute to the President, "who told him to hang in there," who told him to stay the extra hours, days and weeks to help the parties take the first step toward peace."

Atypical Strongman Is Running Panama

By Terri Shaw

PANAMA CITY, June 11 (WP). —At first glance, Gen. Omar Torrijos, Panama's chief of state. looks like a Latin American military strongman in the traditional mold.

Standing at parade rest in carefully tailored and pressed fatigues, he receives delegations with an almost regal air.

But the first impression is superficial. Traveling to the remotest parts of the country in an American-made helicopter, the 45-year-old general spends hours meeting with the peasants, workers, local officials, Indians and Participation is the keynote of Gen. Torrijos's government. Under a new constitution approved in 1972, elected leaders of small local districts participate in decision-making on the local, pro-vincial and national levels of Panama, which has a population

Coup in 1968

But while he gets much of his energy and inspiration from close conject with the people, it is still Gen. Torrijos who runs the country - with dictatorial powers he assumed in a coup in 1968, powers approved by the voters in an election, in 1972,

In the more than five years he has ruled, he has radically changed the government's priorities. He has made heavy investments in social programs and rural development, without al-tering Panama's trade and business-oriented economy.

On the emotional issue of the Panama Canal, Gen, Torrijos has managed to gain the support of virtually all Panamanians and has conducted negotiations with the United States that appear to he leading to eventual agreement on a new canal treaty.

Gen. Torrijos sees himself as representative of a new breed of military ruler.

"The image of the stupid general is disappearing in Letin America," he said in an interview at his modest beach house at the former U.S. military base at Rio Hato, 60 miles southwest of Pan-

At the base, Gen. Torrijos has set up a hasic training camp for the National Guard—which serves as Panama's army, navy, air force and police—as well as military high school for bright youths from lower and middleclass families.

"Our education has been based on humanistic principles for too long." Gen. Torrijos sald. "Humanism never fed anybody or developed a country." To demonstrate "the importance of our dialogue with the people," Gen. Torrijos recently invited a group of touring U.S. newspaper editors to go with him to the banana port of Puerto Armuelles on the Pacific Coast. near the border with Costa Rica.

Instead, he was accompanied by several of the bright, young civilian technocrats who make up his cabinet to hear what the benana workers had to say and respond to their complaints.

The first stop was the head-quarters of the banana workers' union, a frame building with a screened meeting room to let in the ocean breeze. Reports Are Heard

For more than four hours, Gen. Torrijos and his ministers listened to reports on the running of a small banana plantation that had been taken over by the gov-ernment. They also heard about the construction of new schools, plans for a work-study program at a local high school and prob-

Puffing on a Cuban cigar, Gen. Torrijos talked to the boy, then

Turning to the minister of health he asked: "What do you have to say?"

LONDON, June 11 (AP).-A Pakistani woodcarver, deported when he came to Britain to give Princess Anne a handmade double bed as a wedning gift, was allowed into the country yes-

Noor Hussein, a 78-year-old veteran of the British Army in World War I, spent two months carving the ornate bed out of solid teak.

But his visit to Britain last year became a sage of woe.
First, the bed was mislaid, turning up weeks later in a Karachi warehouse. Then Mr. Hussein was robbed of all his savings, amounting to $480, while traveling through Turkey. Finally, when he got to Britain, he was deported.

Immigration officials allowed him to stay long enough only for a peck through the iron railings of Buckingham Palace.

The letter explained that the change in policy was the result of a shortage of Jobs and a rising unemployment rate among American youths, particularly Vietnam veterans and members of minority groups.

"Although it is recognized that there is an important foreign-policy benefit to the United States from the presence of young for-eigners studying in this country, it has been concluded that protection of job opportunities for young Americans is the paranount consideration at this time," the Immigration Service's letter

Foreign students, commenting through their representatives, say the Immigration Service's policy change is unfair. They say they do not believe they represent a serious threat to the employment of American young people." According to the National Association for Foreign Student Atfairs, 27 percent of the 150,000 foreign stadents in this country, last year held summer jobs. The association maintains that these 50,000 or so students did not sigdifficantly affect the American employment situation and that most of them held jobs that were too low-paying or undesirable for most Americana

The Immigration Service answered this criticism by citing a law that requires foreign students, upon entering this country, to sign a statement that they are financially able to study here without working and said that, therefore, any sudden change in policy should not affect most of

Pay, Price Curbs Urged by Mills

WASHINGTON, June 11 (AP). Rep. Wilbur Mills, D-Ark., said yesterday that even though wage-price curbs may be "anathema to many," controls should be reimposed to help combat in-

Rep. Mills, who is chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, said that the controls should be similar to those in effect in 1972 under the Nixon economic program's Phase 2, which is no longer in effect. But he said that they should be mandatory rather than left to presidential discretion. He ruled out price rollbacks. Calling on the leaders of both parties in Congress to act to keep inflation from continuing at a dangerous rate, Rep. Mills said: "The fact that the President may have made a mistake in failing to use controls broadly is no reason for Congress to make an equally bad mistake."

Then, to September 1935, upon bis groduation from college, the tirst shadow passed over bis life. The young Marcos was accused of shooting a local politician who had defeated his father in a congressi election and become his family's bitter rival. Detained in a stork prison cell, the young scholar studied for the bar examinations that wautd contism him as a practicing lawyer and topped them with the highest overage ever scored in the history of the Philippine bar. Then, dramorihis first case his own trial murder—the young Morcos won an acquittal from the Supreme Coart of the Philippines.

Soldier of Daring and Resource

Shortly ofterward, the Pocific War brake aut and the Jopanese invaded the Philippines. The young Marcos was called to the colors as an intelligence officer of the defending Fit-American forces. At ance Lieutenoent Morcos proved himself o frantline soldier of doring and resource.

Coptured by the Joponese, the wounded Marcos survived the Deeth March from Baloon to Capas and was imprisoned in Tarlec. Released from the Torlec concentration comp, he returned to Monito, but was promptly thrown into the dungeen of the old Spanish Fort Santiago, for refusing to disulge information to the enemy. Morcos patiently planned his escape. He misled his captors into believing that he woold betray bis companions in Tayabas and asked to be transported there by trock. But be bad arranged to have the vehicle ambushed by his guerrillo callcagues, and escaped, to join once more in the shadowy struggle to harass the enemy. Mojor Morcos emcraed from

His countrymea with political acumen early marked Mr. Marcos as presidential timber, and it was soon plain that this remarkable man did want the bighest prize al alt. finally Mr. Marcas made his bid for the presidency, running against the incumbent. Diosdado Mocopogol, conducted a compaign which, in its grasp of proctical Philippine politics, its uperring drive for the centers of electorol power and its latty and dignified choracter, was flavless. Mr. Marcos was overwhelmingly elect-

First to be Reelected

The Marcos record, ofter four years os President, surpassed that of any of his predecessors. Thus, it was no surprise that in 1969 he was returned to a second term—the first filipino President to be so reelected—and with the biggest majority ever recorded in Philippine electoral history.

But the problems on the national agendo were graver than cauld be solved in any single leader's term of affice. Poverty, social inequity and rural stagnolion, the burden at centuries caupled with rising expectations, o bouncing birthrote and mass education, the stimuli of modern times, were combining into on exptosive measure. On one hand the entrenched aligarchy, which controlled Congress, naw set itself adamontly against Mr. Marcos' program of re-form. On the other, firebronds from the Monila student movement fonned the smoldering Communist insurgency in portions of Luzon. Soon the Presfound himself caught between

Mr. Marcas tried to meet these threats by inviting the radical elemeats to participate in administration, and by appealing to the social conscience of Congress. But both left and right scarned his aftempts ar concidention radical feft and radical right.

Finally, alarmed by the resurgence of armed Communist octivity and the emelaence of Manist urban querrillos. Mr. Marcas ordered the Army aut inta the field. Task force aperations in the Magist base areas in northwest Luzon dispersed the insurgents, but not destroy them. In August 1971, after the bombing of an apposition palitical rolly in Monilo, Mt. Marcos suspended the writ al hobcos carpus and clomped dawn on urbon anifotors of the two radical proups.

Downward Spiral of Anarchy

This drastic measure was effective in the short term, but as soon as it was lifted, radical agitetian sterted again. And this heightened agitation seemed to be succeeding. By mid-1972 ir had turned nearly oll the Manila media dead set against the administration, and government was beginning to be perelyzed by the inlense rivolry between the political porties, the ideological enemies and between President and Congress. The whale country was caught in a dawnword spiret of onorchy—until President Marcos octed.

The rest is history. The achievements of what Filipines have come to call the New Society are written es the land end its peeple, which have both been imbued with a new sense of optimism and well-beingand of foith in the future. The sweeping reforms of the New Society have started to leave their mark and if there had been some doubts or misgivings in the beginning, these have completely disoppeared. people now are fully reassured.

PRAGUE FESTIVAL A New, Operatic Look At 'Coriolanus'

By James Helme Sutcliffe PRAGUE (THT).—The last five days of Prague's three-week Spring Pestival included enough music to last most cities

Most of the attention at this 29th annual festival, however, was focused on a world premiere production, Slovak composer Jan Cikker's "Coriolanus."

The subject offers a lot for opera: tumultuous mob and battle scenes, public and private conflicts in the Roman Senate and Coriolanus's own proud breast. and ready-made arias climaxing in the long plea of the hero's mother. Volumnia, not to destroy the Rome that had rejected him.

Curlously, though, the big opportunity of correcting Shakespeare's own occasional loose ends so brilliantly achieved by Boito and concentrating the action to clear space for musical self-revelation seems to have been beyond the librettist conductor Zdenek Kosler. He reduced Shakespeare's five acts to three, 35-minute ones of five scenes each (connected by orchestral interludes). All the elements of the plot were retained, but without convincing you that he had recognized the operatic potential of the original except by adding a women's chorus, a lovely two-part incantation for priestesses in Scene IV, the first appearance of Volumnia and Coriolanus's wife Virgilia. This was also the scene in which Cikker's music seemed most attuned to changing moods in the

Woody Allen Wakes Up Two Centuries Late

By Thomas Quinn Curtiss

DARIS (IHT).—In "Sleeper" (at the Publicis-Matignon in English!, Woody Allen awakens, after being deep-frozen for 200 years, to find himself in a totalitarian world, Everyone-and everyone's thoughts—is under central control, manipulated by a dictator and his staff.

The scientists, circa 2174, thaw Allen from his icy capsule to question him about life twn centuries previous. Their relics in-clude photographs that need identification. De Gaulle? A great chef, replies the drowsy Allen. A chef? Yes, a concocter of omelets and souffles.

In this 22d-century realm, robots are the domestics. Allen disguises himself as one of these -but he is sent to a factory for repairs. A pretty poet joins him in his attempts to dodge the guardians; they have a series of narrow escapes, with Allen uttering snappy wisecracks along the way. This lively farce makes a tart comment on the future.

Entertainment In New York

NEW YORK, June 11 (IHT). This is how critics for The New York Times rate new films and stage productions:

Films

"Herbie Rides Again," a Walt Disney production directed by Robert Stevenson and written by Bill Walsh, is "simply not very good," Vincent Canby says. Set in San Francisco, the film takes a firm stand for the defense of architectural landmarks and against real estate developers. It brings back Herbie the Volkswagen, the leading character of an earlier Disney box-office success, "The Love Bug." "He has a major part in the successful campaign of a Nice Little Old Lady (Helen Hayes) to ward off Alonzo Hawk's wreckers to save her home, an old fire-house on top of a San Prancisco hill," Canby says. (Hawk is played by Keenan Wynn.) "All the technical and economic resources of the Disney empire cannot bring sincerity to a machine-made paean in praise of little-guy pluck."

Plays

"Some People, Some Other People and What They Finally Do," at the Manhattan Theater Club, received a mixed review from Clive Barnes. He says: "It is a harmless show, a little too cute in places but for much of the time it can be gently divert-ing if your standards for diversion are not stratospherically high." Jordan Crittenden, the show's author, describes it as "a revue with hardly any music." Comments Barnes: "This is only the first of its deficiencies. The trouble with Crittenden is not that he lacks ideas, not even that he lacks funny ideas, but that his ideas are really one-shot situations pushed beyond their comic potential... Charles Aldman's direction did not seem especially sharp, which only helped to stress the point the that Crittenden has a tendency to belabor his audience." The plus side includes the handsome settings by John Lee Beatty, a talented cast (including Lois Battle, Carol Morley, Crittenden and Rod Browning; and the "hardiy any music" provided by Stephen Lewrence.

Ingrid Bjoner did not dominate Brünnhilde'e music, but she really sang the "Hojotoho," rather than shricking or shouting it, and went on to give a moving, richly sung performance. Sunday brings Birgit Nilsson as Brilmhilde, with Bjoner switching to Siegliude and Theo Adam as Wotan.

Wolfgang Sawallisch's musical leadership was characteristically reliable-solid and well shaped, if lacking the final ounce of ex-altation—and aside from some fluifs in exposed brass parts, the orchestra gave him what he asked. A long evation greeted the musicians at the end, mixed with a few dissenting votes from the gallery apparently directed at

Rome Said to Be Seeking More International Loans

ROME, June 11 (AP-DJ).-Glovanni Agnelli, president of the Flat car firm and of the National Association of Manufacturers, said today that Italy would seek more international credits to boister its economy.

"Central bank governor Guido Carii is to go to Washington to seek the needed credit." Mr. Agnelli sold in a speech. However, a spokesman for Banca d'Italia denied flatly that Italy is seeking any new international credits. He said the only international loan currency being negotiated was $200 million sought by the Italian state railways.

Apart from the statement by Mr. Agnelli, Antopio Giolitti. hudget minister of the resigned government, also said credits would be sought.

Mr. Giolitti, who spoke to the Foreign Press Club, said "without doubt, Italy has need to ask for further credits. The possibility of asking for a drawing on the Federal Reserve swap (of $3 billion) seems natural to me, and probably Carli, during his trip to Washington, will discuss this."

Associates of Mr. Agnelli said that the manufacturers would issue a proposal shortly on cooperation with the unions to avoid a deterioration in the economic situation. The anions, which have made a series of economic planning

Banker Urges Easier Credit To Assist Italian Industry

ROME, July 11 (AP-DJ) .-- A top Italian banker said in an interview published today that one of the first tasks of a new government would be to provide easier credit for industry.

Giordano Dell'Amore, president of the Italian Savings Bank Association, a major source of non-state credit, told La Stampa that the situation is particularly acute for the construction industry.

If credit is not made available quickly, he said, there could be one million unemployed in this sector within two months. He also predicted that by the end of June Banca d'Italia would draw on the $3-billion swap offer made by the U.S. Federal Reserve System.

Mr. Dell'Amore said that 90 percent of all construction was financed through the savings as-societion. Central hank governor Guido Carli said in a recent interview in the weekly L'Espresso that Banca d'Italia would not refinance the association, and Mr. Dell'Amore said the group's funds were very low.

Interest rates have reached 17 percent, he said, and in some cases 20 percent. This high cost of credit has made it impossible for small and medium concerns to function, he added.

Mounting Deficits

He said that one of the first jobs for the government would be to find a way to pay the mounting deficits of state operations. He asserted that the state electricity board is losing 750 billion lire ($1.2 billion) a year, and the national health plan 2,700 billion

He also disputed a recent statement attributed to former Treasury Minister Emilio Colombo that current credit availability was sufficient until autumn.

Meanwhile it was learned that the Ministry of the Interior, just before the government resigned late yesterday, approved 95 localanthority loaus needed to cover deficits that these towns and provinces had posted for 1973.

The total of the loans approved. 15.59 billion lire, is not very large. but the loans must be seen in the context of very strong statements by Mr. Carli that the government must stop underwriting such deficits,

Half Rome's Deficit The total, in fact, is just about half of the monthly deficit of the city of Rome. Mr. Carll, to underline his position, recently turned down a request by Rome to underwrite a loan offering of 50 hillion lire. The government and Banca d'Italia are committed to hold down the growth of credit in the year ending March 21, 1975, to 22,500 billion lire. Roughly half the sum is allocated to the first half of the year, the rest to the WASHINGTON, June 11 (WP). -Treasury Secretary Whitam Smoot today announced to a congressional committee that he will urge President Jamen to ldt a 40-year bun on the ownership of gold by U.S. citizens, possibly by the end of the year.

Coincidentally, it become clear

Mr. Supon and that the bon is "repushent to me," and offered to recommend its lifting, "before the end of the year unless there are damaging develop-ments." The committee then reported favorably on the IDA bill, with the Dec. 31 deadline removed.

The Senate last month set a I deadline in its IDA legislation, and it is possible that a specific date could be restored as the House bill moves through the full Banking Committee and ultimately to conference with the Sepute.

Until now, the Treasury in both Democratic and Republican administrations had stroughy resisted ending the gold ownership restriction, despite strong political pressure, especially from Western gold-producing states,

The argument has been that allowing private gold ownership would not only stimulate gold speculation, but would allow leakages of gold into private holdings.

British Chancellor of the Exchequer Denis Healey told reporters that "all of this is coming to a head very quickly," although the actual mechanics might not be formally adopted until the IMFs annual meeting in Washington this fall.

IMF gold sales on the open market would dovetail neatly with the desire of many European nations for at least a technical revaluation of their own gold reserves, which would provide hetter collateral against which they could borrow cash to meet their balance of payments deficits.

On the other hand, the less developed countries-equally hard hit by the oil price rise do not have gold reserves on which to lean, and have made clear that they will not support monetary reform measures which ignore their plight

CAIRO, June II (AP) .- A sweeping new investment law, designed to attract foreign capital to build potwar Egypt, has been approved by Egypt's par-

The law gives foreign investors a series of liberal tax breaks, and frees them from many of the restrictive socialist controls imposed during the regime of the late President Gamal Abdel Nasser. Details were published in Cairo newspapers yesterday.

Althrough the reports were careful to say that Egypt still is "fully committed to abide by our revolutionary laws." the new rules strike at the heart of Nasser's economic plans, experts pointed out.

The law frees foreign com-panies from a rule requiring 51 percent Egyptian ownership, from taxes on machinery imports, from prandatory worker participation oo boards of directors and from government-set wages, job-secu-rity and profit-sharing rules. The Investments Agency will still have to approve each foreign company coming in. It will give priority to projects filling Egypt's most pressing economic and productioo needs, a spokesman said.

THE AMERICAN PEOPLE The Findings of the 1970 Census By E. J. Kahn jr. Weybright and Talley. 340 pp. $8.95

Reviewed by Steven R. Weisman

THERES a minor truth-inpackaging problem here. The dust jacket of E.J. Kahn jr.'s report on the 1970 census boasts that it is "a reference work without a single chart, graph, or map." But on page 252, the author gets cold feet. "How can one possibly put together a book about the census and not include a single chart or graph?" he asks himself. reasonably enough. "Very well, then," he replies, and proceeds over five pages to present 89 categories of comparison for Tunica County in Mississippi and Fairfield County in Connecticut, the poorest and wealthiest regions in the nation.

The chart actually makes for fascinating reading perhaps be-cause it appears abruptly in the text as a refreshingly efficient way of presenting the facts. The 1970 census, Mr. Kahn says, cost nearly $250 million to undertake, and it produced more than 200,000 pages of data in 15,000 separate publications - material that the author chooses to synthesize in smooth, even prose style. Surprisingly, he succeeds demonstrating how, even for statistics, the paragraph can sometimes triumph over the numbered graph,

Mr. Kahn is a veteran of 13 books of reporting on a huge variety of topics, and he ap-proaches his subject matter here with a cheerful spirit of inquiry. He knows that the material produced by the census is of interest to more than pedants-and yet he knows that even nonpedants are fascinated by trivia.

There are, for instance, statisties that elaborately document the obvious—in 1870, there were 145,-044 blacksmiths and 400 electricians, whereas in 1970 there were 468,459 electricians and only 10,227 blacksmiths; statistics that, equally elaborately, document nothing at all-of 249 female blacksmiths in 1970, six were employed in eating and drinking places and 11 in credit agencies; statistics that are almost completely without meaning, or even reality—of 68,864 known "active drug addicts" tabulated in 1970, only 5,714 were under 21. (Whoever the "active drug addicts" were. it's safe to assume that most of them didn't fill out their census forms.)

There are statistics that point to anomalies—in 1970, there were 26,830 homes with a value of $50,000 or more inhabited by possibly be absorbed by households with annual incomes reader—at best they enter c under $2,000, and there were 2,983 males who, at age 14, were already widowers. And there are statistics that support major formation he basically already with a firmer grasp of formation he basically already with a firmer grasp of formation he basically already with a firmer grasp of formation he basically already with a firmer grasp of formation he basically already with a firmer grasp of formation he basically already with the statement of the statem trends—the median hould for all American families in were only $800; the average come for male doctors was $39

These statistics are usually to read-preferably in brief tings because, predictably emother do become a bit mind-mu ing after a while. The book oken into chapters cove such topics as migration terns, work and income, race ethnicity and patterns of gro But one of the problems is I Mr. Kahn gives scant atteo to the broader social and poli implications of America's de graphy—he doesn't really exp the impact on politics, econor and culture of the shifting rapatterns in the South, for ample, or of the huge explo in the number of young per black and white, during the 19 On the other hand, the l harbors no weighty pretent to being a definitive account the United States in 1970.

Mr. Kahn might also have i a bit more enterprising in his porting on the subject of Ces Bureau oversights. He cite dispute between the bureau the people of Provincetown, M illustrating that the claim being missed in the countin not confined to blacks. The but counted 2,911 residents there though there were 3.416 regist voters alone in 1972, and Kahn presents various claims counterclaims on the matter w out making his own effort determine the reason for disparity.

In spite of these faults, " American People" is interest informative and worthwhile, though it is not structured lil reference work, it has a g index and its chapters are e cially comprehensive on the of the American population to suburbs, changes in job patt'—especially the inequalities underlie discrimination betvthe races and the sexesdocumentation for such start observations as his statement t rural America constitutes. world's sixth largest under veloped nation, backward in come, in housing and in ed-· tion . . .

It can be argued, of course. books like this one are ineffic ways of transmitting informat The thousands of statistics march across the pages car 7 reader, at best they enter c formation he basically aire knew or bits of knowledge that will probably never need to kr

But the census is an import institution. It tells us at less much about where we are gt and who we are as most of: things that pass for news e day. And Mr. Kahn is an au whose fascination with the statics describing the country equal to his journalist's en ment over the variety of per in the country itself.

Control of FIFA Leaves Europe For First Time

FRANKFURT, June 11 (AP) --Power behind the scenes in world soccer today shifted from Europe to South America as Joso Havelarge of Brazil was elected president of the International Football Pederation (FIFA).

The elegant 58-year-old businessman defeated England's Sir Stanley Rous, president for the last 13 years, 68 votes to 52, on a second ballot at the FIFA congress. Havelange failed to pick up enough votes on the first

So the leadership of the world's most popular sport was wrested away from Europe for the first time since FIFA was formed 70 years ago.

Europe gave soccer to the world, but South America has ong been its equal on the field. Brazil, Havelange's home country, begins the defense of the World Cup here Thursday and will be trying to win the tropby for the fourth time.

Artemio Franchi of Italy, president of the Union of European Football Associations (UEFA), called the election "the end of an era in soccer."

For Rous, 79, who has travelled the world in the cause of soccer, it was a sad moment of truth. "It is difficult to realize that I am not president of FIFA," Rous said wistfully. "It will take me some time to get used to it." Havelange said, "I hope I can follow in the footsteps of Sir Stanley. He is the best president FIFA ever had.

Havelanga's success bad been widely forecast. He had campaigned with promises to enlarge the World Cup finals and give more places to the emerging soc-

African delegates turned the voting in Havelange's favor. They met privately yesterday and de-cided to give him their votes en bloc. They were the loudest in their cheers when the result of the voting was announced.

Havelange will not take over from Rous until after the end of the World Cup tournament, At a news conference, he repeated his intention to help all countries. He said he knew South Americans would be pleased with his election, but he would show no favors to South American "Sir Stanley never favored any-body during his presidency, nor will I," Havelange said. "I will spere no effort to help all countries and I will treat them equal-

European soccer officials had been dreading the loss of presi-There has even been talk that

UEFA might split from FIFA. But Franchi, who had campaigned for the re-election of Rous, said: "UEFA will not break away. We wanted a European president, but we respect the law of democracy and we will work loyally with Mr. Havelange. "I hope the new president takes up office where the old one left

Meanwhile, FIFA took a step towards implementing Havelange's policies by authorizing a World Cup of 20 teams instead of 16 when the tournament is held in Argentina in 1978. It will be for the organizing committee and the FIFA executive to decide. Also today China failed to become a member of FIFA. A proposal by Kuwait that China be received into membership and Taiwan expelied was passed, 59 votes to 47, but that fell abort of the required 75 percent majority. Rous described the debete on this proposal as "the most political I have ever heard at a PIFA CODETESS."

It was a setback for the Chinese, who have been meking hig strides recenfly toward wider participation in world sport. A few weeks ago the World Weight -. lifting Federation roted to make China a member and to expel

With all to go for. Borg showed his mettle. In a blazing streak, he had ten points running and then was serving at 4-3 when Erik reached break point. It wasn't good enough. He angled wide of the sideline, lost that game and the match as Borg spun his forehand free to win 0-6, 6-3, 6-3, 5-7, Borg will meet Raul Ramirez of Mexico in the quarterfinais. Ramirez, who made beadlines by beating both Newcombe and Nastase to win in Tehran and knocked off Stan Smith a couple of times earlier this year, defeated Tomas Koch of Brazil, famillar still with the Indian headband and long hair but only occasionally the inspired pleyer of a few years back. Match to Ramirez, 6-3, 6-1, 2-6, 7-5.

The lack of talent is showing in the women's draw. A year ago Chris Evert was the finalist at Rome, Paris and Wimbledon. This year, with Margaret Court, Evonne Goo!agong, and Billie Jean King absent and some of the others playing World Team Tennis, she won in Rome and is favorite again here. Chris tomorrow meets fellow American Julie Heldman for e place in tile semis. In the upper half of the draw today. Raquel Giscarle of the Argentine outlasted Kaija Ebbinghaus of West Germany, 6-3. 6-7, and next meets Olga Morozova of Russia,

In evening shadow, top-seeded The Nastase of Romania disposed of Onny Parun, the wiry New Zealander, 6-4, 6-2, 7-6.

Jauffret bad pulled a thigh muscle Saturday and it wasn't certain, until yesterday afternoon, that be'd be able to take the court. Kodes said after the metch: "I just felt that François played a really excellent game and I was just a little surprised that a guy who was not supposed to be fit for two or three days could play that sort of game." The dope test was believed to be the first carried out after a tennis match. Tournement director Pierre Darmon said: "If it had been e foreign player who beat Kodes, then t think we might have relused. But es it was a Frenchman, we felt we were morally phliged to agree."

He won the first round in a textbook classic of power nunching. But he lost the next six rounds. And the bout was stopped after the seventh when he couldn't see out of his right eye.

"What's the use of being Irish?" commented Billy Conn, "if you can't be thick." A Promise

In his workout Sunday, the 29year-old California beavyweight was about to begin another round when Clancy, who guided Emile Griffith to the welterweight and middleweight titles, whispered instructions to him. Then, as Quarry neared the center of the ring, Clancy hollered: "I've got a reason for that. Tha here any looger to encourage them to dwell upon their oohillty. Beset by sheriffs. prosecutors, querulous scribes and a sullen populace, what great man would not welcome a grand tour abroad accepting the salute of cannon and the neference of sheikhs to remind him that dishooor in the homeland is the true test of prophetbood?

Kissinger's brief stay in Washington after his long stay in Araby must have been particularly unsettling. Having returned R hero only to find that the press was more interested in whether he had lied to the Senate Foreign Relations Committee about wiretapping, he was disagreeably reminded that while be had beeo laboring on the generation of peace abroad a generation of cynicism bad come to full flower at home.

As for the President, whose reventh crisis now seems likely to afflict the country longer than the Vietnam war, be would be less than human if he did not feel an impulse to settle permanently among foreigners and let the subpoenas gather dust at the White House gate,

It is an ebsurd idea, of course, which is precisely what makes it cannot be amended for that purplausible. For the past two years the absurd has been the commonplace in government, and after the first day or two of exciten headlines about the White House's refusal to come back to the United States, we should quickly eccept it, as we have accepted all the other improbabilities of recent months

Such an event would, in fact, be an excellent solution to the entire Watergate effair. The President would be over there someplace working on the generation of peace without being hounded mercilessly by courts and Congress, end the rest of us would

WASHINGTON-One imagines be over here, just as we are now, managing somehow to get along without a President.

Freed from the harassment of American courts-for surely no host country would extradite him he would not have to press the dangerous doctrine that presidents are beyond the law Congress could go home and the rest of us could learn to think about semething other than President Nixon 16 hours a day.

In his domestic manifestation, the President at this stage is, in any case, only an encumbrance to the country. If he were established aoroao as the bringer of peace, we would retain his useful foreign-policy services without the disadvantage of having him permanently planted in the forefront of our vision The Athenians used exile as a government institution for ridding the state of great men of whom it had tired. Aristides the Just, although a good man as the name implies, was voted into exile, the story goes, simply hecause the Athenians tired of hearing him called "the Just."

The Nixon case bas certain perallels. Leaving aside the legal questions of Watergate, President Nixon seems to have tired the country so thoroughly with his conduct of the affair that there might be a substantial vote for exiling him as a nuisance, provided the vote did not imply a judgmeet that he had committed crimes, or was unfit for office, or was anything other than a source of intense national farigue which we should like to have removed,

The Constitution, unfortunatelr. does not provide for exile and pose in time to give us relief. On the other hand, it contains nothing that forbids a president from removing himself to foreign parts and continuing to do his business from over the waters. Presidents. in fact, commonly do this for short terms.

President Nixon would undoubtedly be happier finishing his second term abroad. The Adriatic coast of Italy would be ideal, considering his taste for warm water, After a few years everybody might very well be glad to cheer him oo a triumphal visit to Washington for a weekeod at the White House.

Ethel Kennedy—Very Much Bobby's Wife PEOPLE: Jewelry Pouring Into U.S. Protocol Office

By Rhoda Amon

WASHINGTON (WP).—She's a very private person with a very public name. Although, like all the "Kennedy women," she is often written aboot, Ethel Kennedy seldom gives interviews. Six years after the assassination of her husband on June 5, 1968, she remains very much Mrs. Robert F. Kennedy. She lives with their 11 children et Hickory Hill, McLean, Va., in a rambling 150-year-old, 19-room house.

At 46, she is slim and vigorous though she occasionally uses crutches as the result of a skiing accident. Except for the tiny sunlines around her hazel eyes, she still looks like the Ethel Ken-nedy who a decade ago stood on a chair in her pink maternity dress in her Glen Cove, N.Y., mansion, urging visiting clubwomen to "vote

She goes to mass daily, and when she departs from her daily routine with the children, it is usually to work with the Robert P. Kennedy Memorial Foundation in Washington or attend Kennedy family gatherings. At ooe such event recently—a hockey match for retarded children in Madison Square Garden—she shook hands with a hlind youngster. "Are you Rose Kennedy?" the child asked. "No," she answered, "I'm Ethel, Bobby's wife,"

Q: You never wanted to be "stage center." You only wanted to be a wife and mother, especially after you met Bobby. Do your daughters have the same goals? Or do they want careers of their own?

A: I think they like to be active. They're much more independent, as most children are now. The eldest, Kathleen, has just been married. And Courtney is coming along, she's very domestic. But they're very conscious of the problems and I think they want to do something ebout it.

Q: You mean problems such as the poor and the handicapped and the underprivileged? A: Yes, yes.

Q: Would you like to see your daughters have careers-study law, teach write books? A: Well, I have to admit, my views are old-fashloned. I can't help feeling that women's role is-well, I liked that description of -as wife end mother. I hear about women who have jobs and careers, but they fail to honor mothers. I think it's the most important job there is and the most rewarding thing a woman can do, to raise children.

Q: What about the working mother, who has to work to support her family? A: Well, if a woman has to work, that's one of the problems. I think it was St. Augustine who said the first fire years of a child's life are the most important. It's the time of such enormous development. If a poor working mother has to be away from her child ... I think it's terribly wrong to leave a baby of that age. Q: I remember you were quoted once, after a spell of bad weather, when the sun finally came out, you told a friend, "Up there in Heaven Bobby must have told God he had to do hetter."

How Day Goes

Do you think of Bobby as up there in Heaven watching over you?

Q: Someooe ooce said that your home, Hickory Hill, seems almost as though Bobby was expected to walk in. Can you tell me how your day goes?

A: I have breakfast with the children, and then there's tons of mail. It's just hopeless to keep up with it. And I'm in six car pools a day. I always have my meals with the children. Then I'm like any other mother-there ere doctors' appointments, dentists. Q: Do you have the same friends that you and Bobby alvavs had?

A: I like to think so.

A: Yes, oh, I certainly do.

Q: Would you go back into politics to campaign for Teddy if rao for President? A: Oh yes, but that's a pretty hig if.

Q: Bobby once said he would like his sons to be in politics. Would you like to see them follow in their father's footsteps?

Deso companies are looking in Surodollare cupital and offering erurities in Swiss France or German Marks.

A: Yes, they seem to have a tendency in that direction. And I would be very proud if that's what they choose. I still think it's the most noble profession.

Q: Kathleen was an effective and enthusiastic campaigner for Sen. McGovern during the last election. Would you want her to have a career in politics and public service?

A: Kathleen is married now and, with a husband, it's pretty tough to have two careers. But I'm sure she'll continue to work for candidates she believes in.

Q: Your older boys have had more growing-up pains. Do you ry about them?

A: Certainly . . There's such great uncertainty in the world.

Q: Do you encourage them to make their own decisions?

Children's Decisions

A: Our children get used to making their own decisions very early. Kathleen (now a senior at Radeliffe; has been on her own for a long time, and she's had a very interesting life. She's worked summers on an Indian reservation—she was one of the first to do that. Other summers she's worked with the mentally retarded. Our oldest son, Joe, has had an interesting life too, but his has been more on the adventurous side. He's been a guide on Mt. Rainier. He's been to Africa. He has done a lot of traveling. He went to Bangladesh with Ted and was deeply affected by what he saw there. Right now he's working as a volunteer with underprivileged children in Arlington, Mass.

Q: Do you think children in large families have any special problems—a need to search for individual identity?

A: Children in large families, if they lose anything (in attention) from their parents, get it from their siblings. I think there's nothing like the advantages of growing up in a large family. You learn to roll with the punches. You learn that you have to speak up at the dinner table to get attention.

Q: Do you single out the child who needs extra attention?

A: Yes, if one hasn't spoken up at dinner, I'll make sure he gets a chance. But all of ours seem to be very able to get ettention on their own.

Q: Your husband supported Cesar Chevez and the Mexican and Filipino agricultural workers in their strike against the Californiz grape growers. And you too, have supported Chavez in his lettuce boycott, even visiting him in a Salinas jail. Do you still boycott lettuce? A: I do. and it's very hard for me, because I love lettuce, but I don't huy it. Q: I understand that Robert F. Kennedy Memorial is not the usual foundation. It doesn't just give grants for social projects, but provides fellowships.

A: The Robert P. Kennedy Memorial is e multifaceted thing and it's taken us a while to work it out. We now have Robert F. Kennedy fellows assigned to Indian reservations and to helping the blacks in ghettos. One fellow was associeted with Cesar (Chaves), another started the first all-Indian school in Montana. A Robert F. Kennedy fellow started the first Chicano (Mexican-American) radio station. Imagine the first! We're also concerned about black "pushoots." You know, they find ways to push black children out of school. The children are suspended for little or no reason. You've been ebsent three days—out you go. This happens all over the South. We have three Robert F. Kennedy youth fellows under 18) working out of Greenville, S.C., on that, and two senior fellows in Atlanta, Ga. We heve e study into the state of high school journalism. We do e lot of things very quietly. But the poor, the minority people, they know about us. We have him-ribbon lawyers in Washingtoo who cut through red tape and do marvelous things to help the poor. We just haven't done very well in getting exposure in the press, but it seemed more important to get established first, to get the joh done. Q: I know you still find relaxation in sports. As a tennis player, did you watch Billie Jean King defeat Bobby Riggs and did you, like many women athletes, think it was a good thing for the advancement of women in sports?

A: It's ewfully hard for me to get madly excited about an athlete because she's a woman. I just like to see someone out there giving their all, whether they're a man or a woman.

U.S. Protocol Office

Since it was disclosed that Mrs. Richard Nixon and her daughters had received gifts of jewelry from Saudi Arabian royalty, dozens of valuable gifts to other U.S. officials and their families have flowed into the State Department's protocol office, according to Maxine Cheshire, Washington Post columnist.

Among those who have sent gifts to the office. Cheshire said were: Mrs. Spiro Agnew (a set of diamonds and pearls given to her in July, 1971, by the crown prince of Kuwait); Mrs. William Rogers, wife of the former sec-retary of state (a set of rubles and diamonds given to her in 1972 hy the emir of Kuwait); and Mrs. William Fulbright, wife of the chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee (an emerald-dismond set given to her in 1973 by the petroleum minister of Abu Dhabi).

Under a 1966 law, all gifts valued at more than $50 from foreigners to federal officials and their families must be turned over to the State Department protocol office for cataloguing and disposition—such gifts being the legal property of the U.S. government

Last month, Cheshire disclosed that jewelry given to Mrs. Nixon and her daughters by a Saudi Arabian prince on July 1, 1972, had not been received by the White House gifts unit for processing until March 28, 1974.
